CHAMPAIGN, ILL., October 121.-The political waters in this section are being deeply stirred. Prominent speakers of the different parties succeed each other in rapid succession. General Farnsworth's Democratic rally on last Saturday night was too thin to be even respectable. The merits of the oratory were about equal to the meagerness of the audience. The "great Greenback rally" of last week, advertised fur and wide for Harper, Congressional candidate, and Bates, candidate for Treasurer, was a little better, but indicated no "great uprising of the people" for that

The meetings held by Colonel George Scrogge and Dr. Core, caudidates for the Legislature, and Hon. M. W. The Democrats, fearing for the Irish vote, have secured from Change two leading Irish orators, who are working vigorously, especially in the Thirty-sec-ond Representative District, employing most bitter denunciations of the Republican party, and holding up the old ghost of "Know-Nothingism," and this despite the fact that their dandidate for Congress, Malden Jones, was a leading "Know-Nothing" in the flark-lantern

CHAMPAIGN, ILL., October [21.—The political waters in this section are being deeply stirred. Prominent speakers of the different parties succeed each other in rapid succession. General Farnsworth's Democratic rally on last Saturday night was too thin to be even respectable. The merits of the oratory were about equal to the meagerness of the audience. The "great Greenback rally" of last week, advertised far and wide for Harper, Congressional candidate, and Bates, candidate for Treasurer, was a little better but indicated no "great uprising of the people ' for that

The meetings hold by Colonel George Scropps and Dr. Core, caudidates for the Legislature, and Hon. M. W. The Democrats, fearing for the Irish vote, have secured from Chicago two leading Irish orators, who are working vigorously, especially in the Thirty-sec-ond Representative District, employing most bitter denunciations of the Re-publican party, and holding up the old ghost of "Know Nothingiam," and this despite the fact that their candidate for Congress, Malden Jones, was a leading "Know-Nothing" in the dark-lantern

THE Louisville Plow Co. exhibited a full line of their implements at the Litchfield fair last week, and carried off all the premiums. There was a lively competition by three other firms. Mr John Archer, the agent, who attended the fair, declares it one of the most successful ex-hibltions of the year. THERE is present at the convention a gentleman who has been traveling through Cultifornia establishing Temperance Unions in that State. In his travels he took slung with him a large tent in which to hold his meetings, and while at his work he had presented to him a large flag, which was then to speak 16 minutes and Harris ed in the city last night and registered at he has with him, and it will be displayed on the tabernacie during the session of the National Union.

sented by Ron. T. B. Campbell, the Statesman from Pollyweg.

i. G. Harris, Esq., the Macon Bomes thenes, Crushed with Mertification. A High Old Time.

Two weeks ago Hon. T. B. Campbell-(the reader has doubtiess heard of this gentleman)-the Cicaro of Pollywog and andidate for representative on the green back-flat ticket, while passing through the southern part of the county, dropping words of wisdom here and there, perchance speaking or at any rate thinking of the noble mission of the new-born party, the party which is (not) going to flood the country with Pomercy Nasby money, he, by chance, as it were, stopped his jaded horse in the bustling little city of Macon, the stronghold of Republicanism and home of A. G. Harris, Esq., whose eloquence in defending the Republican party in times past has justly won for him the appellation of "The Demosthenes of Macon." When "Greek meets Greek then comes," etc. It is not necessary to go into details, giving an account of the meeting of these two orators; suffice it to say that the Pollywog gentleman peremptorily challenged Mr. Harris to engage with him in a "just" discussion greenback and republican platforms, Mr Campbell proposing to defend the greenbackers and Mr. Harris to stand by the republicans. This challenge was instantly accepted, and Monday evening, Oct. 21st. fixed as the time, and the city half in Macon, the place of holding the meeting .-During the intervening time the coming discussion was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the men in stores and on the streets, and even the ladies and school children became interested, some predicting that Campbell would crush Harris, and others, with wiser foresight, declaring that Harris would make it red not for the man with the 1 i. d.

The town hall at Macon is half as large as the court room in this city, and the seats were occupied by men of all parties, who had come to hear the cloquence of the rival orators. A large number of Indies honored the accusion with their presence, and seemed very anxious to retire long before the meeting was dis-

THE PUN COMMENCES. At 7 15 Mr. Charles Merris, an uncom promising greenbacker of the true Pomeroy stripe, called the meeting to order, stroking his shaggy beard the while. He hesitatingly announced that it had been agreed that the meeting should be presided over by a chairman and two moderators, and then called for nominations .-Somebody called out, "I nominate W. Γ. Beadles," and Mr. Merris quickly said, "I second the motion." Numinations closed, and Mr. Headles was chosen chairman by a faitering vote. The small boys in the back part of the ball howled and whistled, and Mr. Beadles appeared on the platform and boldly scated himself, hitching his chair near Mr. Campbell and conversing in an undertone.

Squire Hopson was the first moderator chosen, Merris still conducting the business with bungling despatch Mr. Wilson was then elected as moderator No. 2. but when it was ascertained that this gentleman's hearing was defective, Mr II. II. Woodcock was substituted.

The arrangements as regarded the division of time, as stated by the chairman in a low voice, were as follows: Mr Campbell was to open the discussion, occupying one hour, Mr. Harris to follow, occupying the same time Mr. Campbell tional Christian Temperance Union, arrive through Thursday.

CAMPBELL.

This great champion of flat money folded his arms across his heaving breast, and began his remarks as if preparing to hurl a terrible malediction upon the audience and the world at large, speaking in deep selema tones, twitching his shaggy brows, and rolling his eyes upward, downward, and right and left. As was doubtless intended, the audience was deeply impressed, all preserving a delightful stillness. Then, as if preparing to unloose the hounds of war, Mr. Campbell gave an original quotation from the scriptures, as follows: "In thy sweat of thy face thy shall eat bread all the days of thy life." (Intmense applause.) We will inflict our readers with a few choice sentences as uttered by the speaker: "Blavery was a curse, and Jeans Christianid he that won't work neither shall be cat." "The rich and well born [meaning the bondholders] are runnin' this country and gittin' all the sap." [At this point the light on the stand gave ext, owing to a short wick, and Mr. Campbell, who was about to re fer to documents to prove the above de charation, in a little pet of anger turned to the chairman and said: "This is a very poor lamp, is this the best the town can (Great laughter and stamping of feet.) Quiet was finally restored, a lamp taken from the chandeller, and the gen thoman resumed the "thread" of his dis-"Legan and Cannon declare that COSTRE. gold and silver is the only standard mon ey in the land; don't they? don't they cht ch? 'Course they do, and you can't deny it, and what are we goin' to do about "In that dark bour when the rebellion was upon us, when the treasury was compty, what did the government do but createf Why not do it now? Where was Vallandigham, Voorbees and all that class of mea when the greenback was issued? Where indeed, they were doing their loval heat to 'smasticate' it."

Greenback-republicans and greenbackdemocrats were no company for him; he didn't like a three-cornered fight. He millione, has a fine display of latest styles was a straight-out greenbacker, and he gloried in it. He was a candidate for the movelties in millinery goods always is stock. Qet 15 lw sa housest "tickler of the soil."

Mr. Campbell so often repeated the words, "Rich and well-born," that every time he did so the audience fairly yelled, and this was all the appliance he received.

After speaking fifty-seven minutes he inraed to Mr. Woodcock and asked if he had any more time. He was told that he had three minutes more, but the speaker wined his brow with a cotton handkerchief, took a drink of water, and said, "Well, I guess I'll stop here," and took his seat. The audience was very quiet at this point, deep-drawn sighs only being heard from tired individuals. RARRIS was received with a burst of appliause, and our reporter expected to see bouquets flying through the air; but he didn't. Mr. Hazzis was at a loss how to answer Mr. Campbell. It was the worst jumble of words he had ever heard, attacking everybody, promising nothing for the future. He then proceeded to deliver his maiden political speech, defending the Republican party from first to last, engaging the closest attention of his hearers, and being frequently interrupted with loud applause. Turning to Mr. Campbell he attacked the wild theories advecated by him and the fist party in the strongest terms, defending the capitalists of this land who lent their money when the country was passing through its darkest hours. He didn't think it was right to heap cal' umny upon their heads. He defended the financial policy adopted by the administration in a mesterly menner, and did not cease speaking until "time" was called. He was cheered long and loud when he had finished, and it was a plain case that Campbell was routed, root and

CAMPBELL AGAIN. However, Mr. Campbell once more stepped to the front, and as the audience manifested a disposition to retire, the speaker said he would remain until order was obtained. If all left him he would remain and talk to the post in front of him. (Cheers.) The scene which followed is beyond description; it was better than a "kitchen scene" in a pigger show. The speaker gyrated about the stand, the men stamped the floor, and the boys whistled and howled-all was in an uproar. The most mertified man in the hall was Al. Harris, who walked backward and forward in the rear of the hall, muttering vengeance on himself for ever hav ing accepted the challenge He was madder than a March hare Some of his friends tried to comfort him, but like Rachael be would not. Mr. C. having consumed his 15 minutes was called to order. Glancing down the hall, he asked Mr. Harris If he might go on, and Al. replied that he might for all he cared Then the boys renewed the racket, while the speaker presented Pomeroy's great railroad scheme, pacing backward and forward, propounding nonsensical questions, and making himself generally ridiculous. Mr Woodcock could not stand it any longer, and deliberately arose from his place on the stand and left the hall, though it was raining hard without. Finally Mr. Campbell ceased speaking from sheer exhaustion, the ball rent was promptly collected by Meris, the lights were extinguished, and the Campbell-bored audience left the hall. Mr. Campbell received the

THAT "JINT" DISCUSSION. The Political Image of the Day as Pre-sented by Ren. T. S. Campbell, the Statesman from Pollywey.

i. G. Harris, Esq., the Macon Bomes-thenes, Crushed with Mertification.

A High Old Time.

Two weeks ago Hon. T. B. Campbell-(the reader has doubtless heard of this gentleman)-the Cicero of Pollywog and candidate for representative on the greenback-fat ticket, while passing through the southern part of the county, dropping words of wisdom here and there, perchance speaking or at any rate thinking of the noble mission of the new-horn party, the party which is (not) going to flood the country with Pomercy Nasby money, he, by chance, as it were, stopped his jeded horse in the bustling little city of Macon, the stronghold of Republicanism and home of A. G. Harris, Esq., whose eloquence in defending the Republican party in times past has justly won for him the appellation of "The Demosthenes of Macon." When "Greek meets Greek then comes," etc. It is not necessary to go into details, giving an account of the meeting of these two orators; suffice it to say that the Pollywog gentleman peremptorily challenged Mr. Harris to engage with him in a "just" discussion of the principles as enunciated in the greenback and republican platforms, Mr. Campbell proposing to defend the greenbackers, and Mr. Harris to stand by the republicans. This challenge was instantly accepted, and Monday evening, Oct. 21st, fixed as the time, and the city hall in Macon, the place of holding the meeting.-During the intervening time the coming discussion was the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the men in stores and on the streets, and even the ladies and school children became interested, some predicting that Campbell would crush Harris, and others, with wiser foresight, declaring that Harris would make it redbot for the man with the 1 i. d.

The town hall at Macon is half as large as the court room in this city, and the seats were occupied by men of all parties, who had come to hear the eloquence of the rival orators. A large number of Indies henored the occasion with their presence, and seemed very anxious to ratire long before the meeting was disminsed.

THE PUN COMMENCES.

At 7.15 Mr. Charles Merris, an uncom promising greenbacker of the true Pomeroy stripe, called the meeting to order stroking his shaggy beard the while. He hesitatingly announced that it had been agreed that the meeting should be presided over by a chairman and two moderators, and then called for nominations.-Somebody called out, "I nominate W. T. Beadles," and Mr. Merris quickly said, "I second the motion." Numinations closed, and Mr. Beadles was chosen those who did not come by the morning | chairman by a faitering vote. The small and midday trains, will arrive by the boys in the back part of the hall howled evening and night trains, so that by to- and whistled, and Mr. Beadles appeared > conversing in an undertone. Bquire Hopson was the first moderator chosen, Merris still conducting the business with bungling despatch. Mr. Wilson was then elected as moderator No. 2, but when it was ascertained that this gentleman's hearing was defective, Mr. II. II. Woodcock was substituted.

The arrangements as regarded the division of time, as stated by the chairman in a low voice, were as follows: Mr. Campbell was to open the discussion, occupying one hour, Mr. Harris to follow, to speak 15 minutes and Harris

CAMPBELL.

This great champion of flat money folded his arms across his heaving breast, and began ble remarks as if preparing to buri a terrible malediction upon the audience and the world at large, speaking in deep selema tones, twitching his shaggy brows, and rolling his eyes upward, downward, and right and left. As was doubtless intended, the audience was desply impressed, all preserving a delightful stillness. Then, as if preparing to unloose the hounds of war, Mr. Campbell gave as original quotation from the scriptures, as follows: "In thy sweat of thy face thy shall out bread all the days of thy life." (Immense applance.) We will inflict our readers with a few choice sentences as uttered by the speaker: "Blavery was a curse, and Jesus Christ said he that won't work neither shall he cat." "The rich and well born [meaning the bondholders] are runnin' this country and gittin' all the sap." [At this point the light on the stand gave out, owing to a short wick. and Mr. Campbell, who was about to refer to documents to prove the above de to the charman and said: "This is a very poor lamp, in this the best the town can do" (Great laughter and stamping of feet.) Quiet was Smally restored, a lamp taken from the chandeller, and the gentieman resumed the "thread" of his discourse. "Legan and Cannon declare that gold and silver is the only standard money in the land; don't they? don't they ch? ch? 'Course they do, and you can't deny it, and what are we goln' to do about "In that dark bour when the rebellion was upon us, when the treasury was empty, what did the government do but create? Why not do is now? Where was Vallandigham, Voorhoos and all that class of mes when the greenback was issued?

ol best to 'emasticate' it." Greenback-republicans and greenbackdemocrats were no company for him; he didn't like a three-cornered fight. He millinor, has a fise display of latest styles was a straight-out greenbacker, and he of goods in her lies, which will be sold at gloried in it. He was a candidate for the the lowest living prices. All the latest legislature. He hadn't a polished educanovelties in millinery goods always in sion like his-learned friend—he was only stock. Qut 15 lw sh houset "tickler of the soil."

Mr. Campbell so often repeated the words, "Rich and well-horn," that every time he did so the audience fairly yelled, and this was all the applause he received. After speaking fifty-seven minutes he surped to Mr. Woodcock and asked if he had any more time. He was told that he had three minutes more, but the speaker wined his brow with a cotton handkerchief, took a drink of water, and said, 'Well, I guess I'll stop here," and took his seat. The audience was very quiet at this point, deep-drawn sighs only being heard from tired individuals.

BARRIS was received with a burst of applause, and our reporter expected to see bouquets flying through the air; but he didn't. Mr. Harris was at a loss how to answer Mr. Campbell. It was the worst jumble of words he had ever heard, attacking everybody, promising nothing for the future. He then proceeded to deliver his maiden political speech, defending the Republican party from first to last, engaging the closest attention of his hearers, and being frequently interrupted with loud applause. Turning to Mr. Campbell he attacked the wild theories advecated by him and the flat party in the strongest terms, defending the capitalists of this land who lent their money when the country was passing through its darkest hours. He didn't think it was right to heap cal. umny upon their heads. He defended the financial policy adopted by the administration in a masterly manner, and did not cease speaking until "time" was called. He was cheered long and loud when he had finished, and it was a plain case that Campbell was routed, root and

CAMPBELL AGAIN. However, Mr. Campbell once more stepped to the front, and as the audience manifested a disposition to retire, the speaker said he would remain until order was obtained. If all left him he would remain and talk to the post in front of him. (Cheers.) The scene which followed is beyond description; it was better than a "kitchen seene" in a nigger show. The speaker gyrated about the stand, the men stamped the floor, and the boys whistled and howled-all was in an uproar. The most mortified man in the hall was Al. Harris, who walked backward and forward in the rear of the hall, muttering vengeance on himself for ever having accepted the challenge. He was madder than a March hare. Some of his friends tried to comfort him, but like Rachael he would not. Mr. C. having consumed his 15 minutes was called to order. Giancing down the hall, he asked Mr. Harris if he might go on, and Ai. replied that he might for all he cared. Then the boys renewed the racket, while the speaker presented Pomeroy's great railroad scheme, pacing backward and forward, propounding nonsensical questions, and making himself generally rediculous. Mr. Woodcock could not stand it any longer, and deliberately arose from his place on the stand and left the hall, though t was raining hard without. Finally Mr. Campbell ceased speaking from sheer exhaustion, the hall rent was promptly collected by Meris, the lights were extinguished, and the Campbell-bored audience left the hall. Mr. Campbell received the congratulations of Messrs. Beadles, Hopson, Merris and the REPUBLICAN reporter;

only been granted more time. The above is but a feeble report of the proceedings of last night. It will long be remembered, and will pass into history as one of the richest things that has ever happened in Macon.

As both the piece and company are new here, we give below an extract from the Pittsburg (Pa.) Leader in relation to the enterminment as given in that city:

Offenbach's rollicking opera bouffe "Ls Perichole" was given in this city last night, for the first time in English. The handsome young prima donns, Adah Richmond, appeared in the title role.—Her fine vocal abilitius, beautiful face and figure, and elegant costumes were admirably suited to the part. When it is disturbed in its proper action, all kinds of allments are the natural result. The digestion of food, the movements of the heart and blood, the action of the brain and nervous system, are all innacdiately connected with the workings of the Liver. She often said, 'My children laugh at me for selling things, but they never object to the money I get for them.' Her treatment of her slaves will be jedged from her custom of rewarding them at the end of the week in proportion to their industry and good conduct. Saturday evening at Ashland, with the 'darkies, laws and sond them, and sond them of the said principal and interest notes, or the southworth of the
